5A Kong Cheuk Yin, Max

Yesterday, Katie and I went to Max Restaurant. We ate French fries, hamburgers, and a box of chicken nuggets. We talked happily. Suddenly, a selfish man talked on the phone loudly. We felt a bit annoyed and wanted to leave the restaurant.

When we left the restaurant, we saw a pair of sunglasses on the table. Katie asked, 'Whose sunglasses are these?' I thought for a few minutes. Then, I replied, 'I think these sunglasses belong to the noisy man.'

In the end, Katie and I found the man and asked, 'Are these sunglasses yours?' 'Oh yes, they're mine. Thank you!' the man answered happily. In the experience, I learnt that I should be a honest boy.

Yesterday, Katie and I went to Happy Fast Food Shop. We were having French fries, a big cheeseburger and a cup of cola. There was a loud man talking happily on the phone next to us. We were annoyed and wanted to leave. There was a cup of ice water and a pair of sunglasses on the loud man's table.

Next, the loud man left. There was a pair of sunglasses on the table. 'Whose sunglasses are these?' asked Katie. Katie was curious about the mysterious sunglasses.

'Maybe it belongs to the loud man who talked loudly next to us,' I replied. We looked around and saw nothing. We walked out of the fast food shop and saw the loud man walking back home. We gave the pair of sunglasses to the waiter. 'We found a pair of sunglasses on that table. Please keep the sunglasses.' I said. 'Of course,' the waiter replied.

In the end, a man rushed in. It's the loud man! 'Is this pair of sunglasses yours?' I asked. 'Yes, it's mine. Thank you very much!' the loud man replied. We felt happy. I learned that helping other people can make us happy.

Yesterday, Katie and I went to Hayden Delicious Fast Food Shop. The, we ordered French fries, hamburgers, also cola and Starbucks coffee. We added a lot of things so we couldn't finish them all. Katie said, 'Oh my god! You added a lot of things!' Katie found it unbelievable. I replied, 'Don't be worried! I will help you eat!' We talked happily and we were cheerful. Suddenly, we saw an ugly man who was talking on the phone. He was very loud. We found that man very awkward! We suggested the man, 'Could you talk on the phone softly, please?' The ugly man was very angry. The, he left the restaurant.

After that, we were going to leave the restaurant. But suddenly, we found a pair of sunglasses! Katie asked, 'Whose sunglasses are these?' I answered, 'I think these sunglasses belong to the ugly man!' Katie replied, 'But which man?' We were very anxious. I said, 'The ugly and loud man!' Katie suggested, 'Ok! Let me give them back to him.' We cared about the man so we looked for the ugly man for a long time.

Suddenly, the man was back to the restaurant. The ugly man saw us. He said, 'Why did you take my sunglasses?' I replied, 'No! I just want to give them back to you. Don't blame me.' And the security guard checked the camera. The ugly man said, 'Oh! Sorry. I was just very anxious.'

In the end, the man said sorry to us. Then, we went back home. That's an embarrassing and awkward day because we the ugly man made us felt ashamed.

Yesterday, the sun was blazing in the clear blue sky. Katie and I went to Madano's fast food restaurant. We ordered a packet of French fries, a burger and a can of cola. The man next to us was selfish. He talked loudly on the phone and made others so annoyed.

After he left, Katie and I were curious because there were sunglasses on the chair. 'Whose sunglasses are these?' asked Katie. I was thinking at that moment.

All of a sudden, a memory flashed into my brain. 'That selfish man sat here before. I think they're his!' I answered. Then we looked around to find that careless man.

Finally, that careless man came back for the sunglasses. He was glad because he found the sunglasses that were his favourite. We were glad too because we helped others. What a meaningful experience!
